HAZEL GREEN, KY.:
FRIDAY, November 11, 1887.

This State is cursed with moss-backs,
While the mountains teem with wealth;
But though quite short of spondulax,
Hazel Green is the place for health.

We have not seen all the world, and for that reason may be a little enthusiastic about this part of it, but we would like for some one who has been fortunate enough to "swing around the circle" to tell us a few things. And among them, we get up at the head of the column to inquire: If there is another section on the globe that contains so great a quantity of bituminous, cannel and coking coal of equal quality? If there is another section in the world that contains such a variety of timber, of equal quality? If anywhere there can be found superior building stone, and in such immense amount? If there is another section where coking coal, bituminous coal, cannel coal, iron ore and timber can be found in such proximity? If there is anywhere more mica, and of equal purity? If there is anywhere such potters' clay? If there is anywhere more pretty women or a more hospitable people? Finally, if there is any territory with a tithe of these things—all of which abound in the mountains of Eastern Kentucky—where the facilities for transportation are worse? Some "smarty in the band" can learn something to his advantage by answering the foregoing questions, and the rich nabobs of Kentucky who believe they can be answered affirmatively, will find it otherwise if they will come here and see for themselves. "Sight's good," is a slang phrase, but it will prove a truism to every man who will investigate this section of Eastern Kentucky, and every man who will aid in the development of the vast store of wealth in this region, will reap a remunerative reward in return. Kentuckians, for the sake of the blessed land that is your birth-right, turn this way. Try by every honest means to induce immigration to, and investment in, this mountain section. We can not hope to develop all this wealth until you do. Foreign capital will not come in when home capital is being sent abroad. Lend a helping hand to the land you profess to love, and we will soon cease to be pointed at as laggards. Ten years from today Kentucky will prove the pride and the crowning jewel of the pyramid of prosperous States. "Where ignorance is bliss, 'tis folly to be wise," but the Kentuckian who will go elsewhere to invest, in the face of these facts, is, indeed—A FOOL!

A gentleman from Ohio, stopping at the Day House in this place a short time ago, remarked to us, "A man reading the sensational stories of this country, is led to believe that half the people of your section are cut-throats, but I find, sir, that they are the cleverest and best behaved people I ever came in contact with. And," he added, "when I get back to Ohio I shall do what I can to correct this erroneous idea." We told him he could go up every creek, across every hill and down every hollow throughout the mountains, and that he would find the people uniformly polite, hospitable and accommodating. He replied, "I have found that true in every case, and also, that a stranger attending to his own business is as free from harm as a baby nestling upon its mother's breast, even where unfortunate neighborhood feuds and factions exist." We assured him that he was correct in his conclusions, and asked him to give a good report of us, which he promised to do. Newspapers by publishing these sensational stories have done us great injury, and we hope the honestly conducted ones will "sit down" on the habit. It is despicable in any paper, but when the Kentucky press is guilty of it we feel that we would sooner be a JUDAS and betray our CHRIST. Speak well of your State, always, and these sensational snobs will soon simmer down. To act otherwise is treason to the State, and the man guilty of it would trample under foot, for self-reward, the fond mother who gave him life.

We can hardly hope to live to see it, but the time will come, and that during the day of the generation now eating candy and luxuriating in chewing gum—the little lads and modest misses now serving time in school—when Eastern Kentucky—the mountains of Eastern Kentucky—will be the site of the largest manufacturing town in the world. Indications on every hand, geographically and geologically considered, bear us out in this assertion, and any man capable of thinking, who has ever given the matter a thought, will recognize our right to the opinion. No country can boast such a combination of undeveloped commercial wealth, and when development once sets in, these articles of commerce will dovetail into each other so nicely that thousands of manufactories must be planted to meet the demands of one upon another. Car manufactories, carriage manufactories, furniture factories, blast furnaces, glass factories, spoke factories, plough factories, wagon factories, mills of many kinds, blacksmith shops, and so on world without end, will dawn upon this land before many decades.

We can sit in our sanctum and, look across the prettiest town in the mountains—the home of beautiful misses, maids and matrons—see the location of coal beds sufficient to supply the demands of Lexington, Louisville, Cincinnati. But for all this speculators are slow to move, and the monied moss-backs cling to their lucre like misers. By and by, though, they will think of what might have been, and the following will be about their soliloquy: "I wish I had invested in the mountains of Eastern Kentucky and helped develop that region. Those who were shrewd enough to do so, are now the richest men in the State."

Kentuckians, "stick to the punchon," and let us pull our own State out of the mire rather than spend our means in making others prosperous. It is mean in men of means not to develop the minerals of these mountains.

THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION.

The President designates Thursday, November 24th, as the Day for Thanksgiving.

The goodness and mercy of God which has followed the American people during all the days of the past year claim their grateful recognition and acknowledgment. By His omnipotent power He has protected us from war and pestilence and from every national calamity; by His gracious favor the earth has yielded a generous return to the labor of the husbandman and every path of honest toil has led to comfort and contentment; by His loving kindness the hearts of our people have been replenished with fraternal sentiment and patriotic endeavor, and by His unerring guidance we have been directed in the way of a national prosperity.

To the end that we may, with one accord, testify our gratitude for all these blessings, I, Grover Cleveland, President of the United States, do hereby designate and set apart Thursday, the twenty-fourth day of November next, as a day of thanksgiving and prayer, to be observed by all the people of the land. On that day let all secular work and employment be suspended; and let our people assemble in their accustomed places of worship, and, with prayer and songs of praise, give thanks to the Heavenly Father for all that He has done for us; while we humbly implore the forgiveness of our sins and a continuance of His mercy. Let families and kindred be reunited on that day, and let their hearts, filled with kindly cheer and affectionate reminiscences, be turned in thankfulness to the source of all their pleasures and the Giver of all that makes the day glad and joyous. And in the midst of our happiness let us remember the poor, the needy and the unfortunate, and, by our gifts of charity and ready benevolence, let us increase the number of those who with grateful hearts shall join in our thanksgiving.

In witness whereof I have set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be hereto affixed. Done at the City of Washington this 25th day of October, in the year of our Lord 1887, and of the independence of the United States the 112th.
